The Miller Group Helps Local Construction Firm Launch New Office

www.themillergroup.com

Are you thinking of renovating or expanding your office space? Moving to new premises? Building an additional location? Discover how we helped this construction firm launch a complete IT environment at their new offices.

The Problem

Are you worried about moving to a new office?

That's a common concern. As exciting as it can be to get a start fresh, the downside is that you have to set it all up, which can be especially difficult when it comes to IT.

Getting a new IT environment running is no small task, which is why organizations like this construction firm come to The Miller Group. They wanted to move to new offices without any downtime or IT issues...

The Solution

Moving your business into a fresh space can be the start of great things to come—but it can also be a source of major stress, especially where your technology is concerned.

Transferring your IT infrastructure from one location to a new location isn't necessarily as simple as tossing your old hardware into boxes, carting them across town to the new building, and plugging everything back in...

There's a little bit more to it, which is often why it's smart to enlist help from an IT company like ours. In order to get this construction firm up and running quickly, we did the following:

- Testing internet connectivity
- Prepping the new office space
- Transferring servers, networking equipment, and other hardware
- Procuring new hardware as needed
- Configuring systems for the new space
- Testing all systems in the new space
- Providing onsite user support after the fact

The Result

Thanks to our careful planning and execution of this move, the construction firm's staff was able to hit the ground running on day one in their new office. Their IT systems were ready to use, and they faced absolutely no downtime in working at the new location. That's why they rated us 5/5 stars for this project.

"Awesome job!"

-Anne, a member of this construction firm's staff.

In addition to deploying your new environment with minimal downtime, The Miller Group will also provide ongoing maintenance and management. We will ensure your office keeps running smoothly for years to come.
